The panelists were Chad Fernandez, University of Miami; Alecia Tramel-McIntyre, Positive People Network; and Ross Pierre, Community Rightful Center.

Ms. Sarmiento invited the panelists to answer three questions:

 - There were motivational presentations promoting the idea of housing as healthcare.

2. Was there a program or initiative you learned about that you will be able to duplicate in your organization? Or that other organizations should consider implementing?
 - There was important information about Doxy PEP which is newly available locally in select locations and expected to expand to wider distribution sites The treatment is currently only available to MSM and is not effective for women.
 - A housing collective is forming to find funding and housing solutions for people with HIV.
 - There were important resources for starting and enhancing advocacy efforts, particularly at the grassroots level.
